Vengo is the language of the Vengo ethnic group which consists of approximately 14,000 people living predominantly in the village Vengo in Cameroon.<sup>1</sup> The words in this problem are presented in the writing system of the language. The symbol ' represents the glottal stop (the consonantal sound we produce between the vowels in the English expression uh-oh).

Compounding is a common word formation process in Vengo. Similarly to English, compounds are variably written as one word, two words, or two hyphenated words in Vengo. Each Vengo word in the column on the left has its English translation (which is explicitly marked as a noun (n.) or a verb (v.) for clarity) somewhere in the column on the right, but the translations are in a scrambled order.

<sup>1</sup> Speakers of the language call their village Vengo and their language Ghang Vengo [ɟáŋ vənɟó]; however, the village is officially called Babungo and appears with this name on maps of Cameroon, and the language is, therefore, often referred to as Babungo.
